Closure of Lambeth North station

LAMBETH North Tube station will close on July 13 and is expected to reopen in mid-February next year.

The closure will enable two lifts to be replaced. The existing ones are nearly 30 years old and fail regularly, causing travel disruption.

During this time, customers are advised to use neighbouring stations – Waterloo (a ten-minute walk) or Elephant & Castle (a 15-minute walk). Lambeth North is also well served by ten bus routes, connecting passengers to a number of locations, including alternative Tube stations.

Visitors heading for the Imperial War Museum can use local bus services from Waterloo or Elephant & Castle.

Sunday fun on Regent Street

THE Transported by Design Festival kicked off this year's Summer Streets series on Regent Street last weekend. Crowds of people discovered how the design of London's transport has influenced us over the years and continues to play an important part in our daily lives.

This weekend sees health and fitness take centre stage on Sunday. Spectators will line the road for the start of the British 10k London Run, followed by a day of boot camps, table tennis and hockey on an inflatable pitch.
