Trooping the Colour

THE official annual celebration of the Queen's birthday takes place tomorrow. Otherwise known as The Queen's Birthday Parade, it is a chance for the monarch to inspect soldiers from her personal troops, the Household Division.

Following the parade the Queen rides back to Buckingham Palace and appears on the balcony with members of the Royal Family at 1pm to watch a fly-past by the Royal Air Force.

Getting there

The parade takes place on Horse Guards Parade from 10am.

The event is sold out but you can watch the Queen and other members of the Royal family travel to and from Buckingham Palace in carriages from The Mall.

The best way to travel around central London over the weekend will be by Tube and rail. Westminster (Jubilee, Circle and District lines), Charing Cross (Northern and Bakerloo lines) and St. James's Park (Circle and District lines) stations are expected to be busier than usual.
