Advice for planned bus strike

PLANNED strike action could affect a number of bus services today and Monday.

If the strike goes ahead (check for latest news at tfl.gov.uk/bus-strike), it will likely result in severe disruption on a number of bus routes in east and west London, including some routes that run into central London. Some services may not run.

The action is the result of a dispute between Unite and Tower Transit over bus driver employment conditions.

Tower Transit operates less than five per cent of the bus services in London - this equates to 20 day bus routes and eight night bus routes. Services operated by other companies across the capital are not affected and will run a normal service.
