A subterranean screening

DON'T miss the rare chance to watch a film in one of London's eight deep-level shelters at Clapham South Underground station.

From October 18 to 22, the shelter will host a screening of a bespoke Second World War film reel curated by London Transport Museum. Descend the 180 steps and cosy up underneath a blanket before learning about the realities of being a Londoner during wartime.

Tickets cost £46.50 (concessions £41.50) from www.ltmuseum.co.uk/whats-on. The ticket includes a half-price day pass to London Transport Museum, which must be used within one month of your event date, and a ten per cent discount at the museum shop. Screenings last one hour.

TfL Rail improvements continue

WORK to upgrade stations and track on the TfL Rail route will continue this autumn to prepare the existing railway for when Elizabeth line services start in 2018.

From late October until December 2017, there will be weekend closures on the Liverpool Street to Shenfield route.

During this time, Network Rail will install more than 10km of new overhead wires, connect the Elizabeth line's new central tunnels to the rest of the route and continue refurbishing Harold Wood, Gidea Park, Forest Gate and Goodmayes stations.

TfL will continue to fit new lifts at Seven Kings, Manor Park and Maryland stations to create step-free access. The closures will vary each weekend so customers should check before they travel at www.tfl.gov.uk.
