Getting out and about

THERE'S plenty going on in London this weekend. See below for some of the hottest happenings and details of how to get there.

FIELD DAY AND MIGHTY HOOPLA

Those lucky enough to have nabbed tickets are in for a treat at Brockwell Park. The Field Day Festival opens at 1pm today and at 11.30am tomorrow, with a wide range of music from high-profile international performers. From midday on Sunday, the park plays host to Mighty Hoopla – a colourful celebration of London's alternative club culture.

Getting there: The nearest station to Brockwell Park is Brixton (Victoria line), which is a 12-minute walk. Clapham North (Northern line) is a 22-minute walk. A number of bus routes stop nearby and there is dedicated bike parking. Festival-goers are advised to use public transport or cycle, as there will be no car parking spaces available near the park.

PUSHING BOARDERS

This weekend-long celebration of skateboarding offers a packed programme of talks, films, creative workshops and, of course, skateboarding itself. On Saturday, talks take place from 10am at the Bartlett School of Architecture, while on Sunday events are based at House of Vans, Waterloo, from midday. Register online for a free place at pushingboarders.com

Getting there: The Bartlett School of Architecture is a three-minute walk from Euston Square station (Circle, Hammersmith & City and Metropolitan lines) and a four-minute walk from Euston (Northern and Victoria lines).

House of Vans is a short walk from Waterloo station (Bakerloo, Jubilee and Northern lines). London Eye Waterloo Pier is also close by.

There are a number of Santander Cycles docking stations near Euston and Waterloo, and several bus routes stop at each location.

LONDON HONG KONG DRAGON BOAT FESTIVAL

This free, family-friendly event takes place on Sunday from 10am at the London Regatta Centre. Visitors will have a chance to enjoy Chinese food and culture while watching some exciting boat racing. Expect traditional dancing, colourful costumes and fierce competition from some of the UK's greatest paddlers.

Getting there: Royal Albert station (DLR) is a five-minute walk from the London Regatta Centre.
