Lighting up Trafalgar Square

TENS of thousands of people are expected in central London this Sunday afternoon for the Diwali celebrations.

Now in its 16th year in the capital, the festival of lights promises to pack Trafalgar Square with lively music and dance, along with an authentic street food market, craft and community stalls, comedy and yoga.

As well as food, drink and entertainment, visitors can learn how to drape a sari, join a Garba performance and practise some new dance moves in one of the workshops.

There's also a dedicated children's zone with lots of entertainment and activities, and the opportunity to experience mindfulness and meditation.

The festival runs from 1pm until 7pm and the nearest Tube station is Charing Cross (Bakerloo and Northern lines).
