Weekend entertainments

THERE'S always plenty on in London to keep you amused, even if it's a virtual event enjoyed from the comfort of your own home.

A KIND OF HUSH

Performers from across West End theatre and the Royal Ballet have come together to make Hush, a new original song and dance film. It aims to highlight the importance of positive mental health during the coronavirus pandemic, and to showcase the UK's performing arts at a time of mounting concern for the sector.

Hush can be viewed free on YouTube. However, if you would like to make a donation to Acting for Others, which provides financial and emotional support to industry workers in times of need, you can do so at www.actingforothers.co.uk

AKÉ FESTIVAL

Before the pandemic, you would have had to travel to Nigeria to take part in this spectacular celebration of black culture. Now, for the very first time, you can take part virtually, for free.

More than 700 artists, writers, poets, musicians, dancers and thinkers will be joining the largest art and books festival in Africa, taking inspiration from the theme 'African Time', exploring the continent's history of hardship and resilience.

This weekend, you can look forward to a book chat with Petina Gappah, author of Out of Darkness, Shining Light, a panel discussion on Decolonising Africa on Feminist Time, and storytelling with Usifu Jalloh. Visit akefestival.org to register and view the full programme.

Reduced night services

THIS weekend, there is no Night Tube or Night Overground service, and limited Night Bus services. This includes tonight's night services.

Staying safe when travelling

LONDON is now categorised as 'high' alert, which is Tier two of the Government's new three-tier system. Measures are in place across the network to keep everyone safe.

Carry hand sanitiser with you, and wash your hands before and after you travel. Face coverings must be worn over your mouth and nose on public transport for the entire journey, unless you are exempt. If you don't wear a face covering, you could be refused travel or face a £200 fine, which doubles with every violation up to £6,400.

The quiet times on public transport are between 8.15am and 4pm and after 5.30pm on weekdays, and before midday and after 6pm on weekends.
