

Reshaping the future of our city

Race for space: Have your say at London Transport Museum's Late Debate

DEBATE UNTIL LATE AT LONDON TRANSPORT MUSEUM

HEAD to London Transport Museum on Thursday November 22 for an exciting evening of debates, workshops and expert-led talks.

With London's population expected to exceed ten million by 2036, this late-night event will be asking guests to consider the questions the 'race for space' poses for our city.

Ponder your thoughts at the bar, enjoy music from the resident DJs and don't miss the chance to see the museum's collection after hours – including its new Future Engineers gallery.

Here are a few highlights:

CULTURE CAPITAL

As a result of the capital's growing population, housing, transport, commercial and hospitality development are all competing for increasingly scarce space.

Will there still be room for culture, artist studios, creative workspaces, galleries, performance spaces and public art? Can culture play a part in enriching London's changing places or is it itself a driver of gentrification and displacement?

A panel of leading experts, including New London Architecture's chairman, Peter Murray, will be discussing these challenges and exploring potential solutions.

LIGHTNING TALKS

Listen to a line-up of 'quick-fire' talks presenting the latest ideas on how to manage the space we all share.

Hear about evolving streets, the design of healthy cities, creative solutions to the housing crisis, the possibilities of inventing future cities and lots more.

FUTURES MARKETPLACE

Meet the visionaries, inventors and change-makers who are reclaiming urban space, developing innovative transport models and shaping the city from the inside.

Talk to leading authors and learn about the newest transport and urban design ideas from cutting-edge researchers and scientists.

The Late Debate event runs from 6.45pm to 10pm. Tickets cost £15 (£12 concessions). To book tickets, visit ltmuseum.co.uk

Engineers in the driving seat

EXPLORE the fascinating world of transport and engineering in London Transport Museum's new Future Engineers gallery, which has six interactive exhibits to keep everyone entertained.

The permanent gallery inspires an interest in Science, Technology, Engineering and Maths (STEM) subjects and highlights the variety of jobs in engineering.

Test your skills and solve the transport problems faced by modern day engineers.

Then try out a state-of-the-art palm scanner (the latest in ticketing technology) and an Elizabeth line driving experience, where you can climb into a replica train cab and use a computer system to navigate your way through tunnels.
